Passenger Transportation Board
MOVING FORWARD, TOGETHER

About the Passenger Transportation Board

The Passenger Transportation Board (Board) is an independent administrative tribunal in B.C. established under the Passenger Transportation Act. The Board licenses and regulates passenger transportation services in B.C. in accordance with its authority and mandate under the Act.

Decision-making responsibilities

The Board is responsible for two types of decision-making:

- Application decisions on special authorization licences related to passenger directed vehicles (i.e., taxis, limousines, shuttle vans), inter-city buses, and transportation network services (TNS, also known as ride-hailing).
- Systemic decisions that act as larger economic levers to address groups of licensees, individual industry sectors, or the entire passenger transportation industry.

The Board may also hear appeals regarding administrative penalties imposed on a licensee or operator by the Registrar of Passenger Transportation. The Registrar is located in the Ministry of Transportation and Transit and has different responsibilities from the Board under the Passenger Transportation Act.

Application decisions

As part of its regulatory role, the Board is responsible for making passenger transportation licensing decisions on special authorization applications. In rendering these decisions, the Board will consider several criteria according to section 28(1) of the Act:

- Is the applicant a fit and proper person to provide the proposed service?
- Is the applicant capable of providing the service?
- Is there a public need for the service that the applicant is proposing?
- Does the application promote sound economic conditions in the B.C. passenger transportation business?

Systemic decisions

Another aspect of the Board's regulatory role involves making system-wide decisions to stabilize the passenger transportation market in a manner consistent with the Board's strategic goals. These "systemic decisions" can affect groups of passenger transportation licensees, different sectors, or the whole passenger transportation industry. Systemic decisions can include matters such as rates, fleets, or operating areas. Since there can be far-reaching consequences to these systemic decisions, the Board undertakes a careful review before making such decisions, gaining understanding of the ways in which these decisions may affect the industry and public. The Board relies on data-driven objective evidence to support systemic decision-making.

Objective evidence-based decision-making

With both application decisions and systemic decisions, the Board is required to consider objective evidence. Statements of opinion and anecdotal information are not the same as objective evidence. Objective evidence includes information or facts that are verifiable and accurate. To evaluate applications and better understand the passenger transportation market, the Board reviews industry data and subjects it to quantitative analysis. Through this analysis, the Board obtains the standard of objective evidence required to conduct informed decision-making. In all its work, the Board is guided by its clearly defined mission, vision, and values.
